ANNUAL REPORT.

1917.

It is with no desire for apology, but only with a sense of appreciation of the privilege of representing Miss Parsons in her absence, that I present to you the report of the Massachusetts General Hospital Training School for Nurses at the close of its forty-fourth year.

A year ago, although our part of the world was shaken and awed by the conflict in Europe, our Training School (especially our undergraduate body) was not directly affected by the war in its well-established routine. But such is no longer the case. The problems of the nursing profession during the year have very definitely been moulded by the progress of European History, and our own school is very conscious of the pressure.

History shows us how Florence Nightingale's part in the Crimean War made possible the very beginnings of the establishment of Training Schools for Nurses on an educational basis. It was the Civil War that aroused this country to the fact that our American women had no means of training in nursing, — that line of work which always devolves upon women, especially in the time of war or disaster; and as a result of the consciousness of that need, the same year (1873) saw organized the three first Training Schools for Nurses in this country, of which our own school was one.

The greatest effect of the present war on nursing history is yet to be determined, but of one thing we are sure: never before has it been so definitely urged upon us that we are preparing nurses year by year, — not merely for the sake of our own institution, far reaching as are its forces, not only for our own community, but that the cry of the sick and suffering of mankind throughout the world, and today especially in Europe, may be efficiently met by trained women. That our graduates have been ready is shown by the fact that since the war began, one hundred and seventeen of them have gone across to serve under the British, Canadian, or American Expeditionary Forces. Others have served in England, on hospital ships or in army camps in this country, and one has recently sailed for Europe as the second Edith Cavell nurse.

The most important event of our year's history has been the organization of our Base Hospital, started the year before with the idea of possible service on the Mexican Border, but mobilized last June for active service in France, with Major Washburn as head of this Unit and Miss Parsons as the Chief Nurse. Of the sixty-five who made up the nursing personnel, the majority are graduates of the Massachusetts General Hospital, fifteen of whom were last June on our Training School Staff. On June 26th they left Boston and were the first Base Hospital to be established in France under the American Expeditionary Force, after the arrival of the American troops in Europe.

Were it not for the loyal coming forward of other graduates and the willingness to be shifted to new positions by those of the staff who remained, we should have felt quite crippled when all at once one half of our force was called into service. These nurses gradually settled into new permanent positions, and by November we had the full quota of our working force. But ready for emergencies, when the call came early in December for nurses to go to Halifax at the time of the disaster, six of our graduate staff, who were Red Cross nurses, volunteered their services, and, generously released by the hospital, were ready to start in two hours time. The last of these six but this week returned to our force.

Much has been heard of late concerning the great shortage of nurses due to the war; and we are asked what our school can do to meet that need. Let me emphasize a fact that is not always understood by the anxious public: that this shortage in no way applies to the rank of pupil nurses, the women to whom (under supervision) is intrusted the routine work of caring for the sick in our hospital; and this is true of hospitals in general as well as to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Never have we had a greater number nor better qualified women applying for entrance to the Training School than during this last year. There are many young women today who, although not caring to become regular trained nurses as a choice of their profession, feeling the need for nurses in these times of stress, wish a short or part course of training which shall fit them to enter that particular phase of war work. We have carefully considered, with other schools, the advisability of offering a shorter course temporarily, but have decided that it is not a wise plan. Only one of our reasons shall I take the time to present to you.

We are fortunate to have more good applicants than we can receive at present, and because of the rather unusual advantages of the Massachusetts General Hospital at the disposal of its Training School, each month of training adds strength and ability to the pupil. Shall we be content, then, to send out a less well-equipped nurse to our army and navy hospitals, to care for the men on whom today rests the responsibility of our national crises? No. Our soldiers and sailors need the highest type of graduate nurses that we can produce. That is the obligation that the country sets upon our training schools.

Two years ago we began enlarging our school to be ready to meet the needs of our new private hospital opened last spring. We are continuing enlarging, as clinical material warrants taking more nurses, in order to meet the far greater need of this country and its allies. Our Annual Report at the close of 1917 showed the following statistics:

Graduates	30
Pupils	182
Probationers	30
Affiliated	9
Post Graduates	3
Total	254

Since then we have admitted a new class of 25 probationers, making a total of 279, a very large number for a 390 bed hospital.

It is the affiliated and elective work that makes our course strong and makes it possible to admit as many pupils. These affiliations now comprise 17 nurses at Wesson Maternity Hospital.

6 nurses at Boston Lying-In Hospital (this has recently been changed from a six to a four months course).
4 nurses at McLean Hospital.
6 nurses at Eye and Ear Infirmary.
1 nurse on District.
2 Social Service nurses.
1 X-ray nurse.
1 Research nurse.
17 nurses in the Private Ward.
2 seniors assisting Miss McCrae.

The number of pupil head nurses has been increased to twelve, thus giving valuable executive experience to certain well-qualified nurses and thereby freeing graduates for service outside of the institution, — one of the ways we may meet the present shortage.

That the school is cosmopolitan in its interest and the outlook toward the present and future activities of its graduates is evidenced by the various nationalities represented on its roll. More of our nurses come from Canada than from any one country outside of our own; but we also have students representing Newfoundland, England, Ireland, France, West Indies, Italy, Switzerland, Russia, Norway, Finland, Turkey, Greece, India, and China.

It would be of interest to print the names of all of our graduates who have gone into "active service" since the war began. In the near future we hope to publish a Service List, and hope every graduate enrolled under the Red Cross, the Army or Navy Nursing Corps, the British or Canadian Expeditionary Forces, or any other war organization, will keep the Superintendent of the Training School informed of her assignments. When it shall be published we want this list to be complete.

Because of our special interest in the United States Army Base Hospital No. 6, serving in France under the American Expeditionary Force, we are giving the names of those of our number who have been enrolled in it from the beginning:

It is with regret and sorrow that we report the following deaths during the year from among our alumnæ:

Constance M. Sinclair (1897)
Clara Stevens Glidden (1888)
Annie Best Jenkins (1895)
Maria B. Brown (1883)
Elizabeth Chambers (1895)

The continued interest of the Ladies' Advisory Committee has been most helpful throughout the year. At Christmastime they presented the nurses with several books which have been a great addition to the reference library; and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer again this year offered prizes of the "History of Nursing" and the "Life of Florence Nightingale" for the two best senior essays. These were won by Miss Eleanor Fowle and Miss Mary Dias.

For many years one of the most vital forces on the Ladies' Advisory Committee has been the presence of Mrs. Alexander Whiteside. Her death, immediately after the recent graduation, left with all who knew her a sense of loss which would be overshadowed by great sadness were it not for the consciousness of her kindly personality, which still lives with the Training School.

During last summer seventy-four "nurses' aids," young women who have been enrolled under the Red Cross to be on call for volunteer work in our hospitals in case of need, have been admitted to our wards for ten days of practice work assisting the nurses in their various routine duties.

The Training School Endowment Fund, which has grown more slowly during the past year than during the year previous, continues to be supported mainly by graduates of the school and is now somewhat over $4,000. If we are to reach our goal of $500,000 at the time of our fiftieth anniversary, 1923, we must prove to friends of the school that our aims and our accomplishments warrant the interest of those whose money may be spent in equipping women to meet the needs of the world in the various ways that only well-educated nurses are able to meet them. Just at this time, when the cost of hospital supplies has so greatly increased, the training school work could be much better carried on if it did not have to depend upon the already overtaxed treasury of the hospital. But without an endowment of our own, we are absolute dependents for our very existence.

At graduation, more than at any other time during the year, we missed the presence of the one who has so ably led the Training

School in the last seven years. But although Miss Parsons is temporarily in France, the inspiration of her ideals for each individual pupil has been a conscious influence. The message she sends to this class of 1918 is this: "It makes me very happy to think the reputation of the school is safe for years to come in the hands of such women as we are graduating."

Respectfully submitted,

HELEN WOOD.
